About the Artisans

Corr - The Jute Works

Corr - The Jute Works markets handmade items created by Bangladeshi women, and in 2000 received the National Export Trophy in recognition of the significant contribution made to its country's economy. Corr primarily produces jute and terracotta handicrafts. Today, 4,000 artisans are members of the 154 rural cooperatives that make up Corr-The Jute Works. The organization works with women regardless of caste, religion or race. They focus on job training, literacy and health issues, developing leadership skills and generating awareness of women's rights. Micro-credit loans have also been made available to enable independent small business projects.

Great Grip Beauty Scrubber

Say goodbye to rough skin with this terracotta beauty scrubber. Made for durability and longevity, it has a great grip and is ready to work for you! A wonderful gift idea or stocking stuffer.

Special Details:

For hundreds of years, potters in Bangladesh have been creating pottery and other clay ware to meet the domestic, ritual, and ceremonial needs of the local communities amongst whom they live. During this time, changes in traditional pottery methods have been almost imperceptible!

Materials:

jute cord, terracotta
