Birds Of A Feather Cushion Cover

A family of birds perch above a Haitian walker in this vibrant, square cushion cover. Each is hand-sewn and embroidered from the impoverished Jacmel Valley region of Haiti. Together, women practice the age-old tradition of Richelieu embroidery—a richly textured needlework of intricate design and rare beauty handed down from nuns to the women of Haiti over a century ago.

Today, with their handiwork, the women of Les Dix Doigts generate a sustainable income for their families and their community—a testament to their commitment and courage. With beauty and grace, they are sewing the seeds of a better future through the artistry of the past.
